

New Mexico State Land Office
Aubrey Dunn, Commissioner of Public Lands

Dear Agricultural Lessee:

Enclosed is your copy of the State Agricultural Lease Renewal. The lease will commence on October 1, 2015, and shall expire at midnight September 30, 2020.

This letter is intended to clarify the rights and uses of state trust land to which you are entitled under the terms of your state agricultural lease. The STATE LAND OFFICE operates pursuant to a multiple land use concept whereby several parties may be granted different rights in the same land. For instance, a grazing lease might be issued to one person, a right-of-way across the lease land to a second person, and a sand and gravel lease on a portion of the leased land to a third person. In addition, the same leased land could be subject to entry by holders of valid hunting and fishing licenses issued by the Department of Game and Fish as well as to entry by State Land Office recreational access permittees. Each of these persons have a legal right to utilize the land for purposes set out in his or her granting instrument. It is the responsibility of the Commissioner of Public Lands to sell such rights in the land to raise revenues for public schools and other state institutions.

Your state agricultural lease authorizes you to use the forage and the surface of the state trust lands covered by your lease in conjunction with your ranch or farming operations. The lease does not, however, give you the right to authorize others to use the leased state land in any manner. Only the Commissioner is authorized to sell rights in state trust land. You may not allow others to engage in activities on the land you lease such as placing billboards, cutting or gathering wood, digging for sand and gravel or using an easement to cross the leased state land. These and other rights in the state trust land are subject to sale by the Commissioner, and you as a state lessee, may neither sell them nor give them away.

Your agricultural lease is issued subject to the rights of other interest holders. Although your rights as a lessee are more extensive than those of most other interest holders, you do not have the right to interfere with their exercise of valid, authorized rights in the leased lands. A mineral lessee has the right to conduct reasonable mineral exploration, development or production activities on the leased premises.

You have the right to ask others on your leased state trust land to identify the interests they hold in the same lands by showing you the instrument executed by the Commissioner that grants them rights in the land. You have this right because you have a legal obligation to prevent trespass and waste by others on your leased land. We at the State Land Office appreciate the diligence with which state agricultural lessees through the years have participated in the protection of our state trust lands. We want our agricultural lessees to be aware, however, of the rights of others in the leased lands as well as their own rights and responsibilities.

If you have any questions concerning the specific rights and responsibilities granted by any type of State Land Office instrument, please call the Deputy Commissioner Laura Riley at (505)-827-5760 or Lucille Martinez at (505)-827-5732 or write to me at New Mexico State Land Office, P.O. Box 1148, Santa Fe, NM 87504-1148.

Sincerely,

Aubrey Dunn
